

Photo credit: Richard Graff

Literacy & Rhetorical Studies Research Series

The Research Series promotes awareness of current scholarship about literacy and rhetoric by providing faculty and students affiliated with the LRS Minor an opportunity to present their research. Information about past and present Research Series events is available at writing.umn.edu/lrs.

embodied literacies: voice, performance, and space

friday, 17 february 2012 | 12:00–1:30 pm | 135 Nicholson Hall, East Bank

An interdisciplinary discussion featuring work in progress by

Richard Graff (Associate Professor, Writing Studies)
“Greek Rhetoric In Situ”

This presentation will tour a selection of digital models being produced as part of a larger study of ancient Greek sites of oratorical performance, with discussion of the on-site investigations and interdisciplinary collaborations involved and of the expanding vistas for the project as it creeps into the realms of the digital and virtual.

Photo credit: Richard Graff

Photo credit: Weisman Art Museum

Judi Petkau (Ph.D. Candidate, Curriculum & Instruction)
“Pedagogic Address in Art Space”

Exhibition or art installation spaces often provoke audiences into embodied practices of meaning making. This study of an encounter by a teen and his teacher within the Weisman Art Museum offers insights into this discursive space, which is both critical and aesthetic.

Candance Doerr-Stevens (Ph.D. Candidate, Curriculum & Instruction)
“Appropriating a Media Voice: Multimodal Struggle in Digital Media Composition”

This presentation examines the digital media composition process of collaborative groups, focusing specifically on the multimodal struggle that occurs among peers as they gather, select, and edit media. Of particular interest is how students appropriate media to express individual views in a collective text.

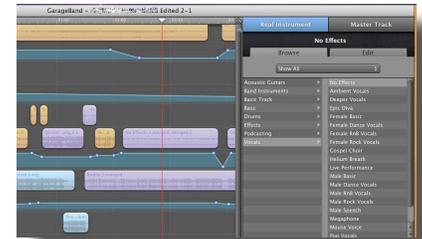

Photo credit: Candance Doerr-Stevens

Lunch will be provided. Please register at myC4W (writing.umn.edu/myC4W). If you are not affiliated with the University of Minnesota, send an email to writing@umn.edu to register.

UNIVERSITY OF MINNESOTA