

TEACHING NUANCED ARGUMENTS AND CRITICAL THINKING: AN MWP FALL WORKSHOP

There is rarely an issue that has just two sides. However, this simplification of complex ideas is pervasive in current discourse and leads to divisiveness, weakens critical thinking, and devalues multiple perspectives. Join us as we hear from practicing teachers who are utilizing the National Writing Project's C3WP (College, Career, & Community Writers Program) resources to augment their own curriculum in ways that respond to students' learning needs. We will share a variety of demonstration lessons for your consideration and offer a space to dialogue about the practical and pedagogical considerations of this work as we strive to answer the contemporary call for respectful argumentative discourse.

When: Oct. 27

8:30am-12:30pm

Where: Nicholson Hall

216 Pillsbury DR SE

Minneapolis, MN

55455

Cost: Free

CEUs available

Register at mwp.umn.edu