APA DOCUMENTATION STYLE: REFERENCE LIST

Most social science disciplines use American Psychological Association (APA) style to cite sources. APA-style documents include brief in-text citations (see quicktip on “APA Documentation Style: In-Text Citations”) in combination with a more detailed listing of sources in a separate reference list at the end of a document.

The requirements for what to include in reference lists are designed so that another researcher could find and refer to the same sources you've included. Below are guidelines adapted from Diana Hacker and Nancy Sommers’s A Writer’s Reference, 7th ed. (2011), that show the basic principles of most forms of APA citation. For more details, see the Publication manual of the American Psychological Association, 6th ed. (2010).

Here is an example of what an APA-style reference page typically looks like. Using standard formats for your entries enhances your credibility with academic readers, and alphabetizing your list helps fellow researchers quickly locate the sources that you refer to in the body of your text. For more formats & source types, visit http://www.dianahacker.com/resdoc/ or see the Publication manual of the American Psychological Association, 6th ed. (2010).

APA-style reference lists are evenly double-spaced, with one-inch margins all around. Entries are alphabetical by author, or, if no author, by title. Every entry begins flush left; additional lines are indented 5 spaces.

Label your page “References” in the center of the first line.

Note that in general...
- authors’ names are in reverse order;
- only the first letters of authors’ first names are given;
- “and” is written as “&”;
- only the first title word (and the first subtitle word) is capitalized;
- the retrieval date for online sources is needed only if the content cited is likely to be changed or updated (as in Wikis, for example).
